DIVE SEASON STARTS

After a long winter, the ice is off the lakes, and we have been getting wet wherever we can! I was diving at Clear Lake last week, and Sylvan Lake the week before. The water temperature is certainly warming up!

TWIN LAKES OPENS

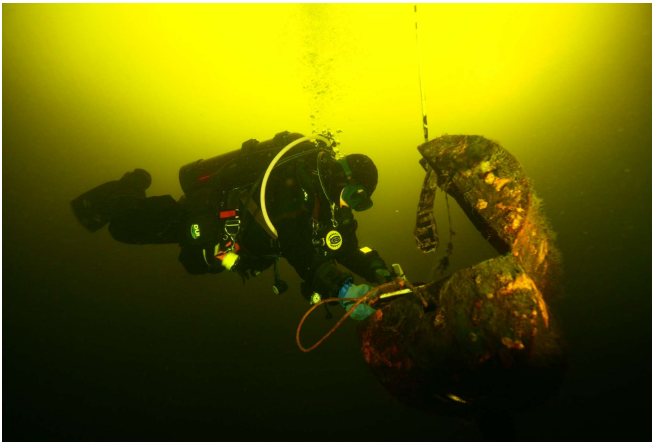

The dive season at Twin Lakes officially started on May 20! The campground is open, allowing access to the Twin Lakes Wing Diver's facility. Check out the Twin Lake Divers page for club registration (if you are interested).

OPEN WATER LESSONS

We expect this year will look similar to last year with respect to restrictions from Covid. However, this has caused us to rethink the way we teach, and some of the changes are for the better and will likely stick around. In particular, groups will be kept to two or four divers for confined and open water dives. Confined water dives will be at sandy locations in Sylvan Lake. I'll be running courses upon request. I will be starting the confined water dives soon! I've already got one diver looking for a buddy for their confined water dives! Contact me for scheduling.

CONTINUING EDUCATION - DRYSUIT COURSE

I am able to teach a wide variety of continuing education and specialty courses. In particular, I'll soon be teaching a Drysuit Specialty, which consists of one confined water dive (Sylvan Lake) and two Open Water Dives (Twin Lakes). For more reading on why you might want a drysuit, check out our blog.

EQUIPMENT RENTALS & AIR FILLS

I've got a selection of gear available for rent here, and have access to the full selection of dive gear from the Wainwright store with notice. I have a portable breathing air compressor in Red Deer as well. Air fill & tank rental cards are available upon request!
